

Black Stump Buttresses Brooyar

QUEENSLAND

Version 2 - June 2009

Photos, art and content - Gary Cobb and Lee Cujes

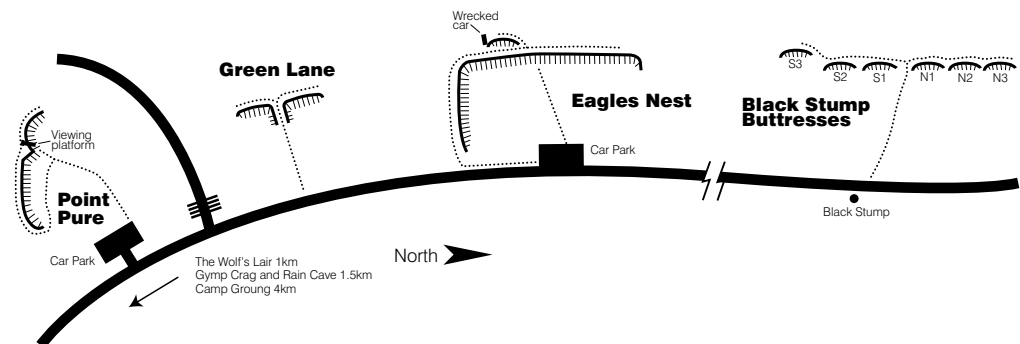

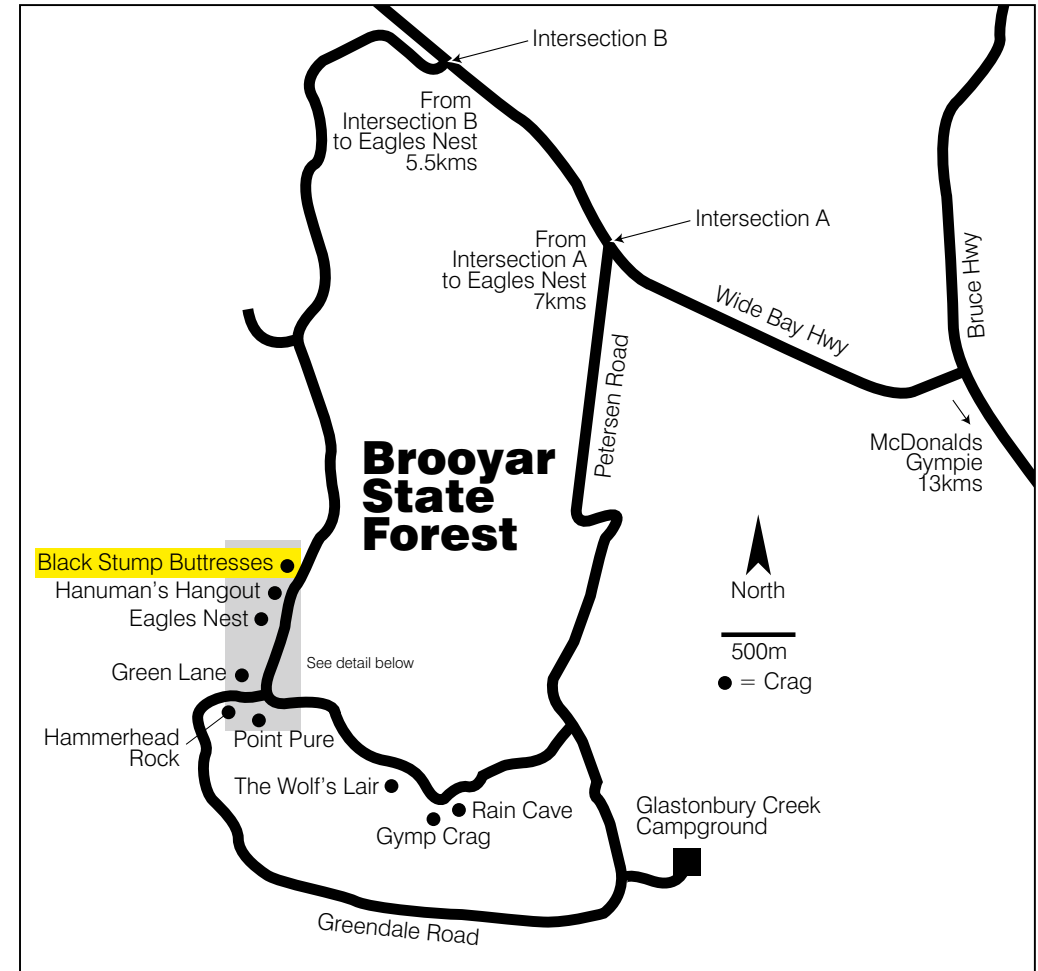

Very popular new area thanks to the combination of prolific bolting and amenable grades. The crag is 400m north of Eagles Nest. Drive north up the hill and you will see a large black tree stump on your right, park somewhere here. The crag is on the same side as existing crags and is very close to the road. There is a well trodden path. This area is made up of six small buttresses. Take the scree with large fallen tree running all the way down it.

Routes and buttresses are named N for North and S for South of the descent track.

Hanuman's Hangout Brooyar

You can easily walk here from the R end of Black Stump Buttresses (3 minutes), otherwise it's located 200m past Eagles Nest if the Nest is the last crag you come to. Park at the bottom of the slope as you go to start uphill again. Walk uphill 50m, then forge directly L away from the road. When the boulders are tallest, head downhill and will soon find yourself on top of the overhang, 200-250 metres off the road. The scree slope is to the R if facing away from the road. Some old routes exist with carrots at the bottom of the scree; these offer easy generic Brooyar climbing.

Eagles Nest Brooyar

QUEENSLAND

Version 2 - June 2009

Photos, art and content - Gary Cobb and Lee Cujes

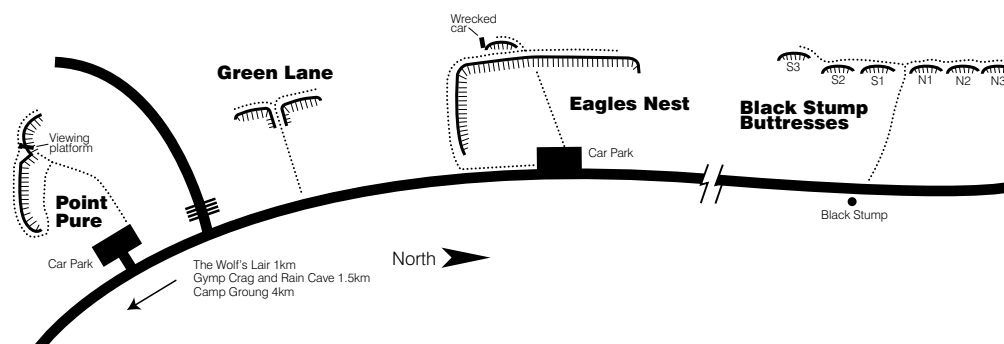

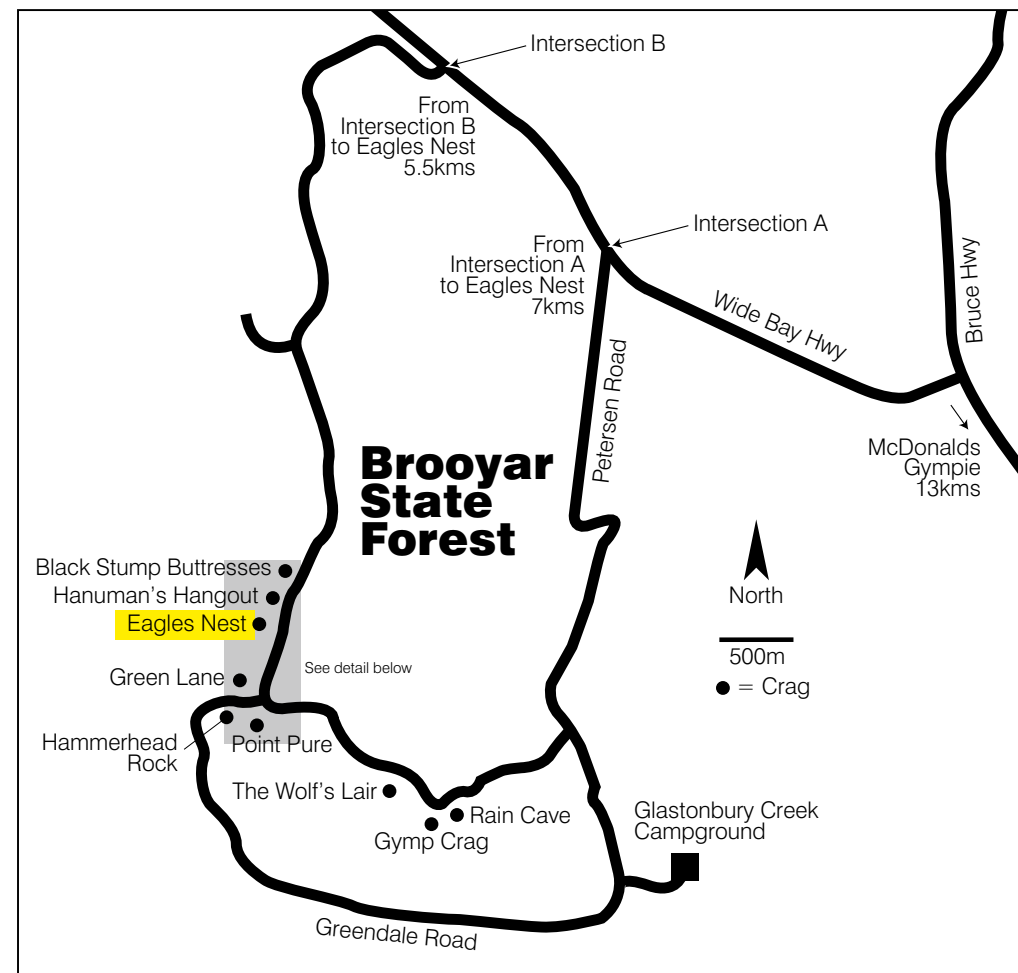

An atmospheric crag with an impressive 40m high main wall which hosts perhaps Brooyar's best climb (although this is a topic for considerable debate!), Looking For The Sun (19). There are some shorter routes for the beginner, and some juggy roof pumps for the more advanced climber. In addition, some steep thin faces should provide enough skin pain for any budding masochist. Eagle's Nest receives shade only in the morning, so get in early. The crag is signposted.

From the parking lot walk south along the road until you see the descent track where there is sloping rock that drops away to the left. Follow this track down to the crag.

Climbs are listed from right to left facing the rock.

Green Lane Brooyar

QUEENSLAND

Version 2 - June 2009

Photos, art and content - Gary Cobb and Lee Cujes

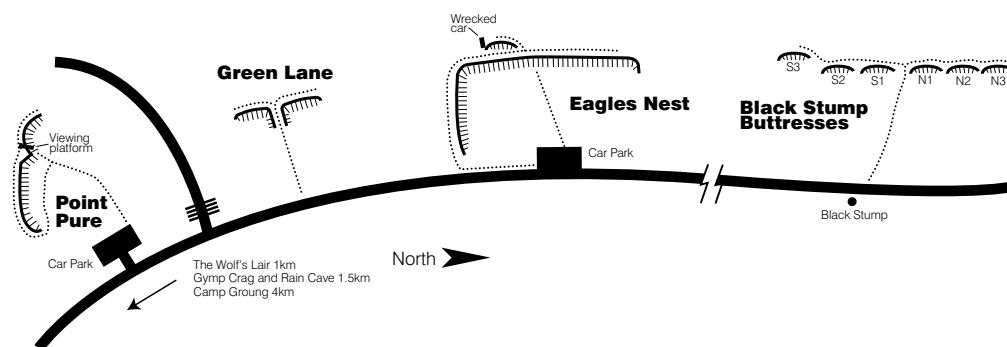

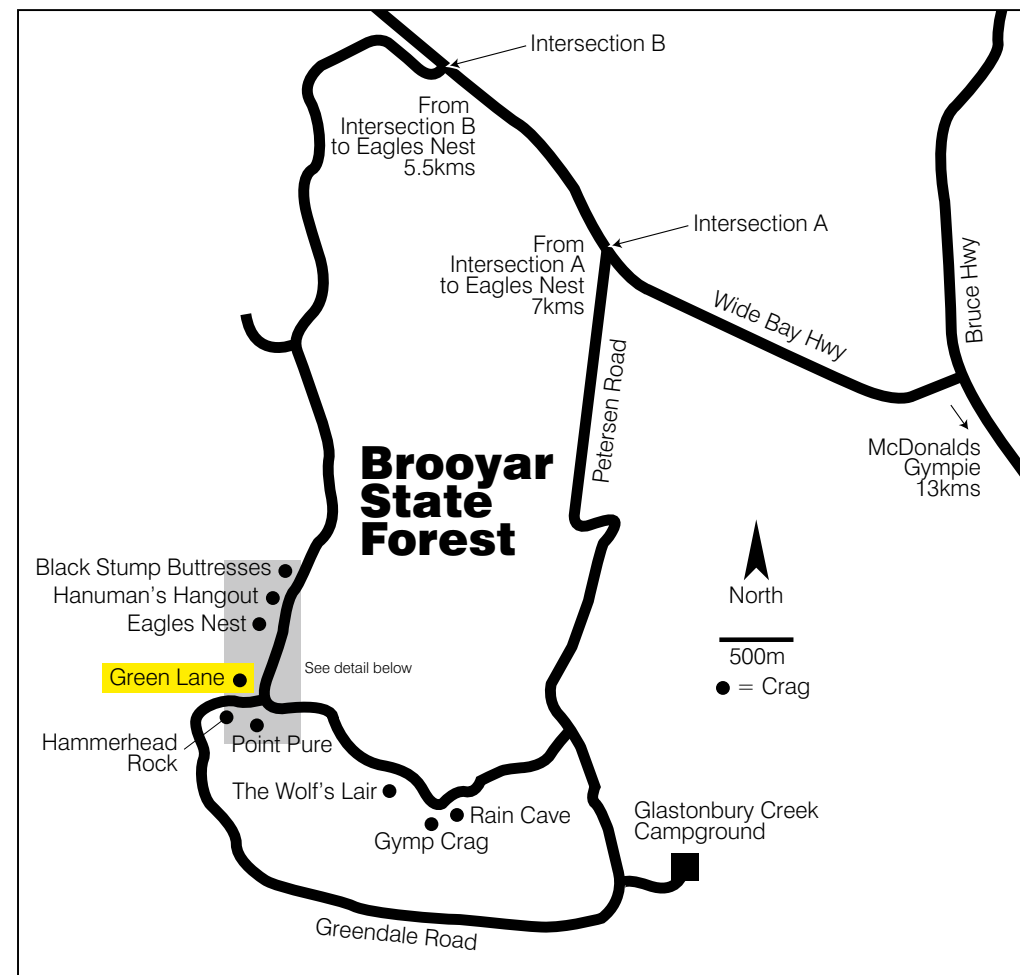

A beautiful small crag with some of the best rock around. Recent rebolting efforts have made the routes even better. Drive down the road about 500m past Eagle's Nest and park in the Point Pure carpark, but walk back down the road (towards Eagle's Nest) to the "Greene Road Abseiling Points" sign. Don't walk down "Greene Road" though. 10m R of Greene Road, a small track leads down a gully to the base of the cliff. Green Lane is shaded in the morning, but no good after rain.

The descent gully splits the crag in two. The left hand side (looking at the crag) is much bigger than the right. Routes start around 15m R of the descent gully.

Hammerhead Rock Brooyar

QUEENSLAND

A new micro crag which may be a useful escape if Black Stump is crowded. Here you'll find a handful of short, well-equipped sport routes with a nice selection of grades, complete with lower-offs (good for beginner to intermediate climbers). To get here, drive to Green Lane, then turn down Greene Road and follow for 200m - the crag is obvious. Park without blocking road. Thirty second walk-in up the hill. The cliff gets afternoon sun. Make sure you jump on Catch Of The Day - it's the pick of the bunch.

Point Pure Brooyar

QUEENSLAND

Version 2 - June 2009

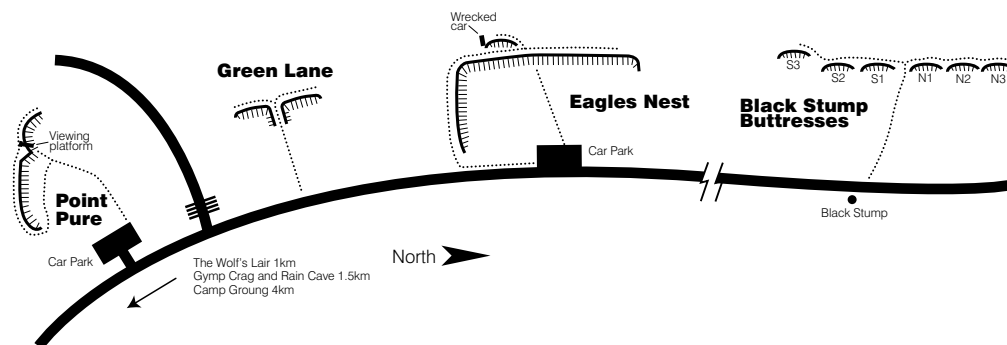

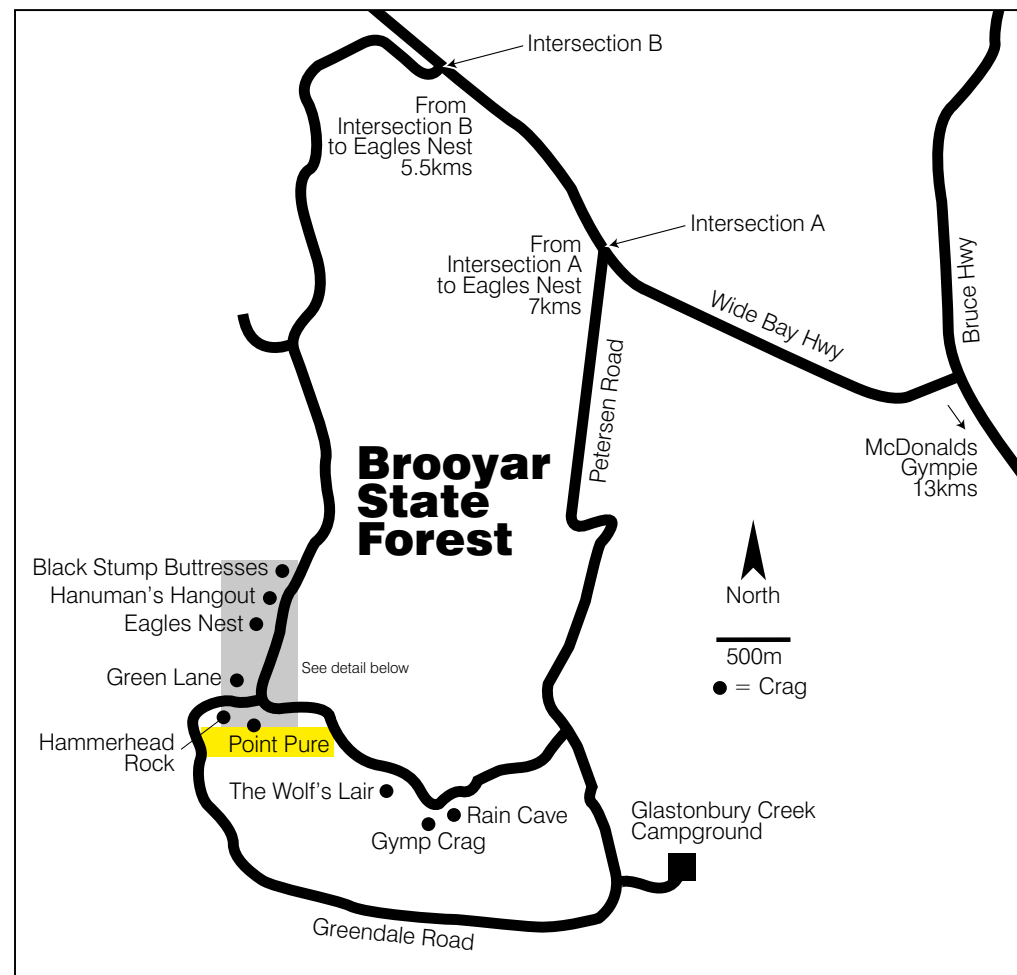

Photos, art and content - Gary Cobb and Lee Cujes

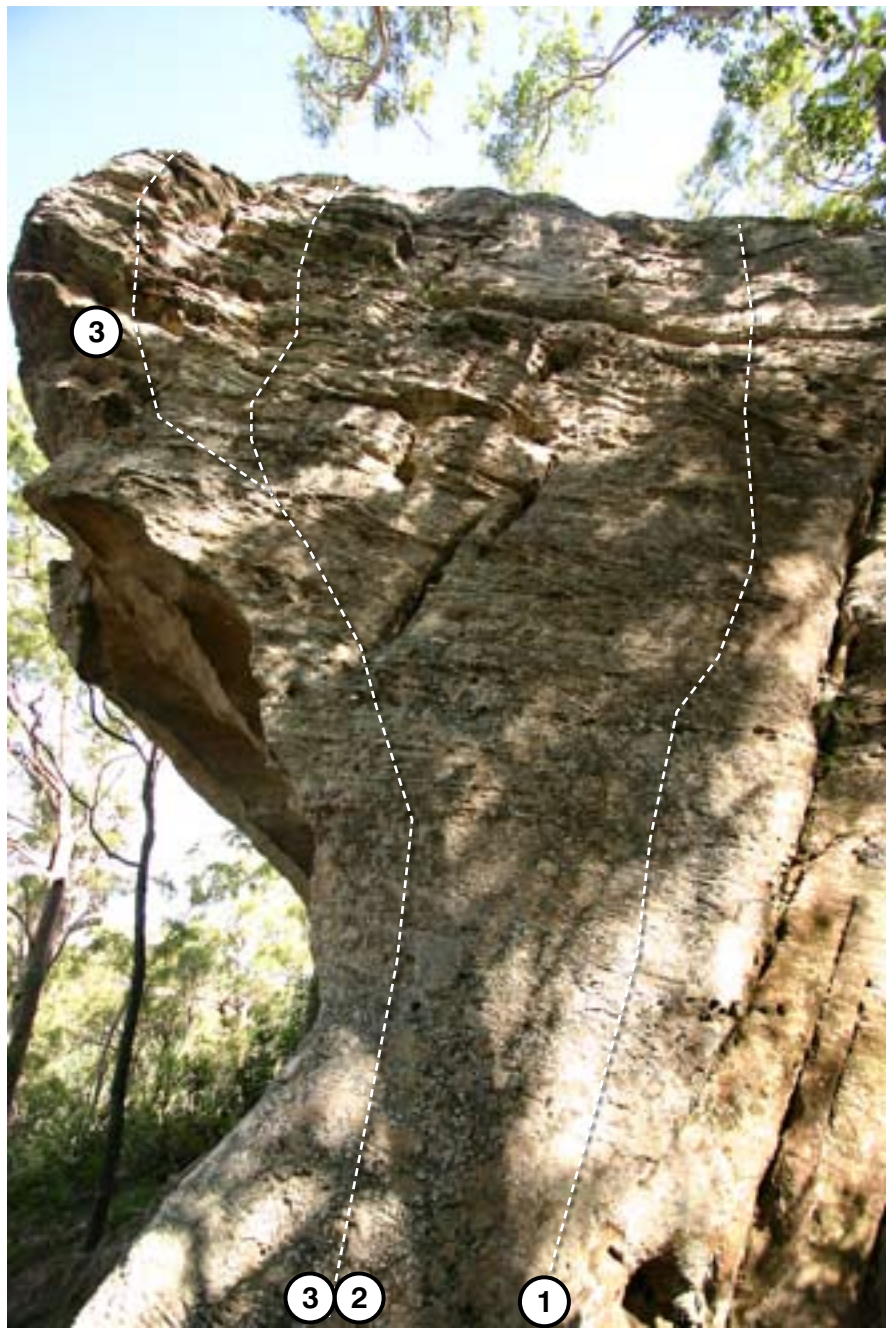

Some good longer routes with a mixture of bolts and natural protection. From the Eagles Nest carpark drive 500m south along to find an intersection. Take the left road and park in the Point Pure carpark. From the lookout walk left and down to the base of the cliff. The classic overhang The Great Devoid is found on the far R of this crag. As Point Pure features Brooyar's softest rock, beware of choss and keep an eye out for dodgy bolts. If it moves, don't trust it!

The Wolf's Lair Brooyar

QUEENSLAND

Version 2 - June 2009

Photos, art and content - Gary Cobb and Lee Cujes

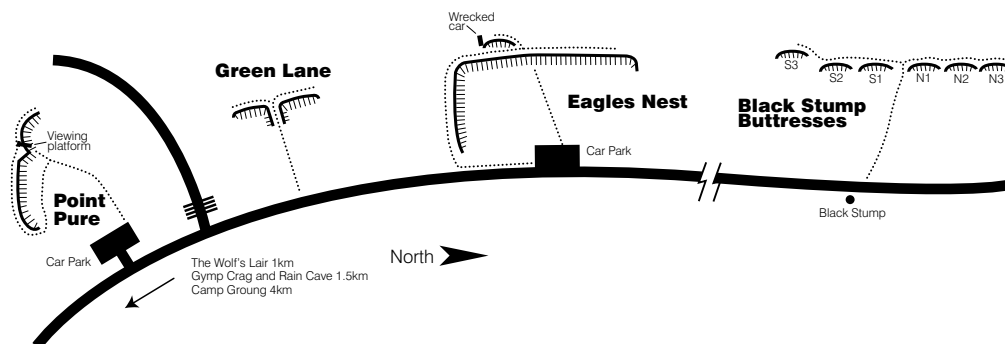

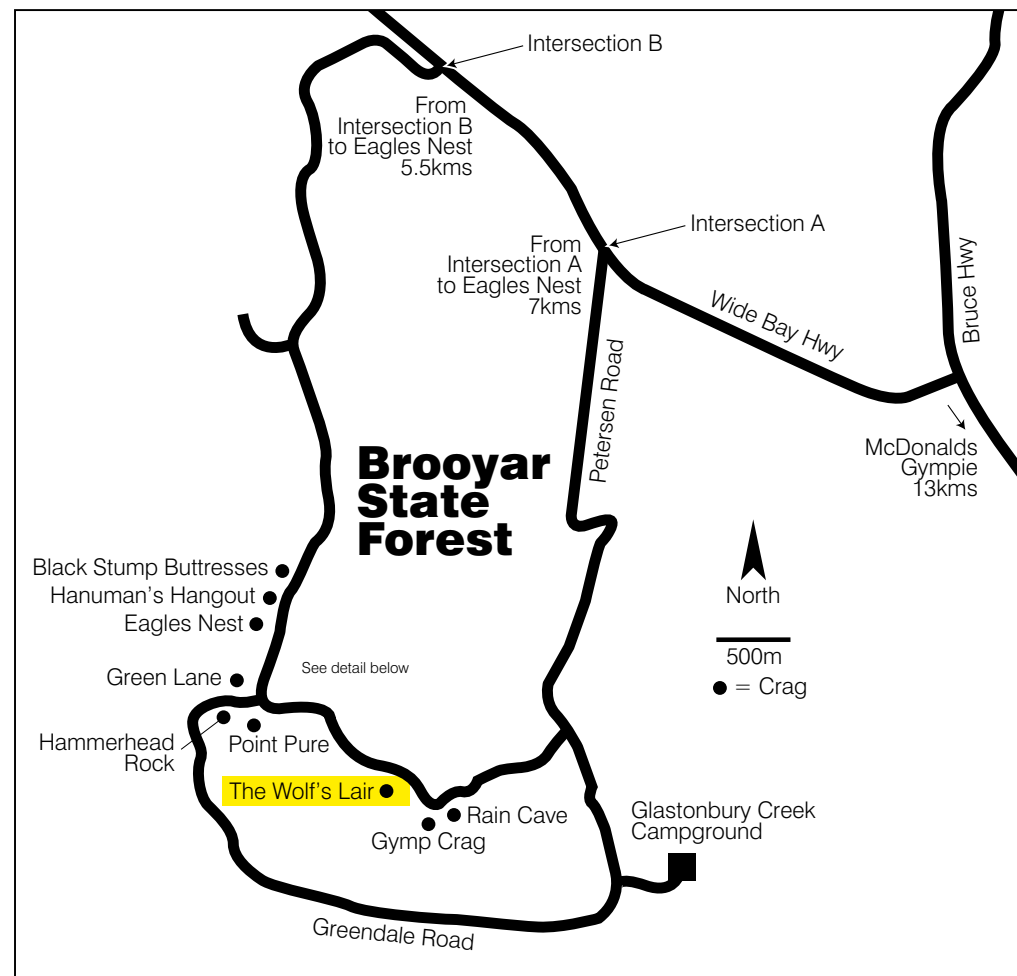

1.1km south east down the road from Point Pure is The Wolf's Lair. The rock is pretty good and all the bolts are glue-in's. Park where a small dirt road branches off on the L side of the road and walk across the road and down to the cliff. There is basically no track, so you'll have to search around a bit - there are some small rock cairns that show the way - look for the top of the cliff! Walk down the left side (looking out). Brooyar's hardest route is here, Carnivore.

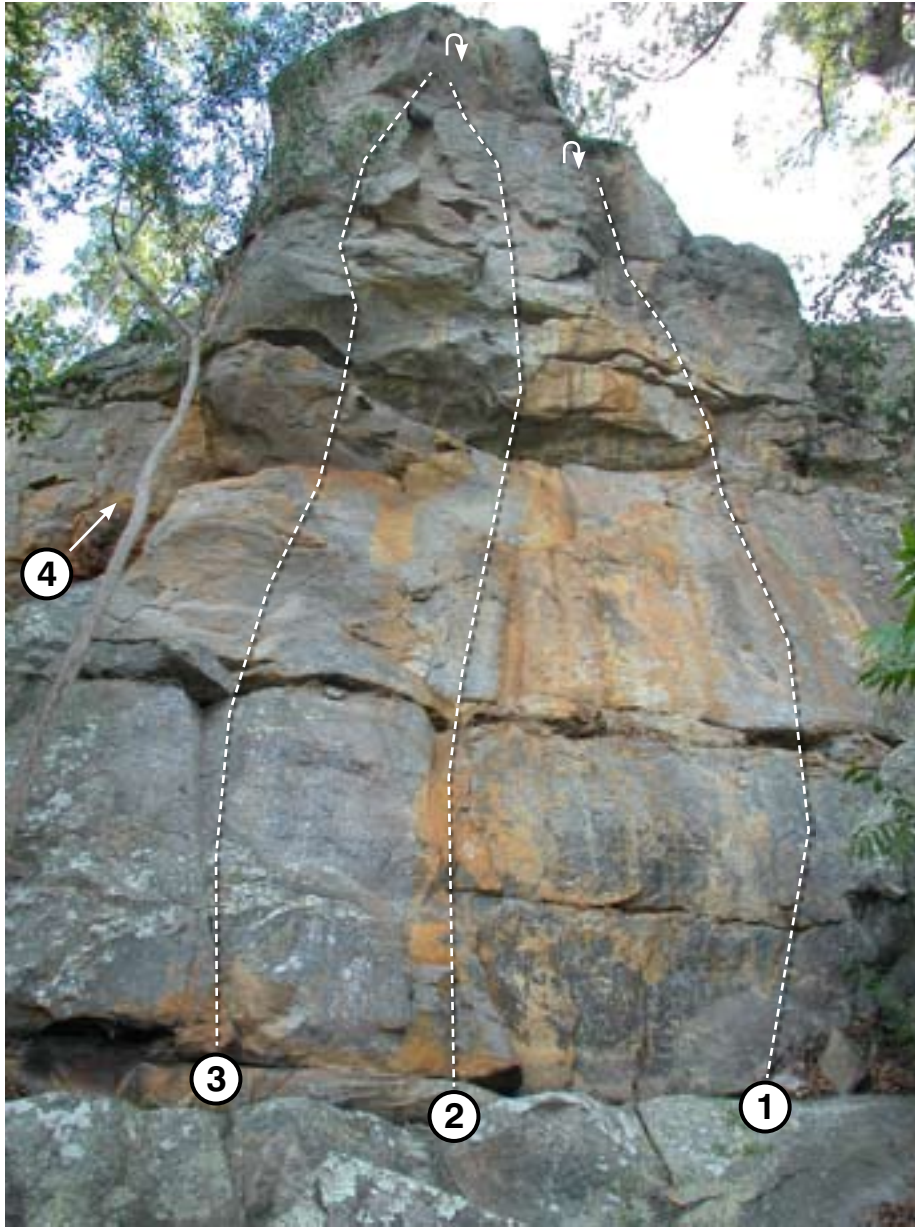

Routes are numbered from entry to crag base.

Rain Cave Brooyar

QUEENSLAND

Version 2 - June 2009

Photos, art and content - Gary Cobb and Lee Cujes

This small area is 1.4km from Point Pure and is partly visible from the road off to the R. Park off the road before the yellow “S - curves” road sign and walk up R toward the rocky outcrop. Walk down around this to encounter a large roof with solid huecos and fins.

Superb roof bouldering with great landings are to be found here, even when it's pouring rain, which is the area's main drawback.

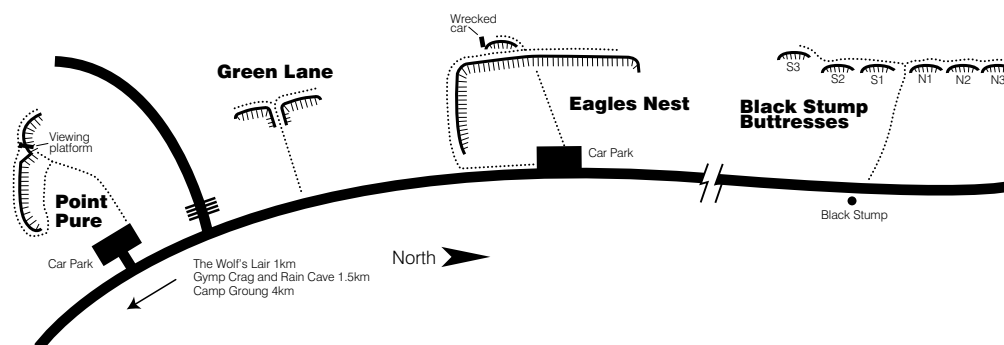

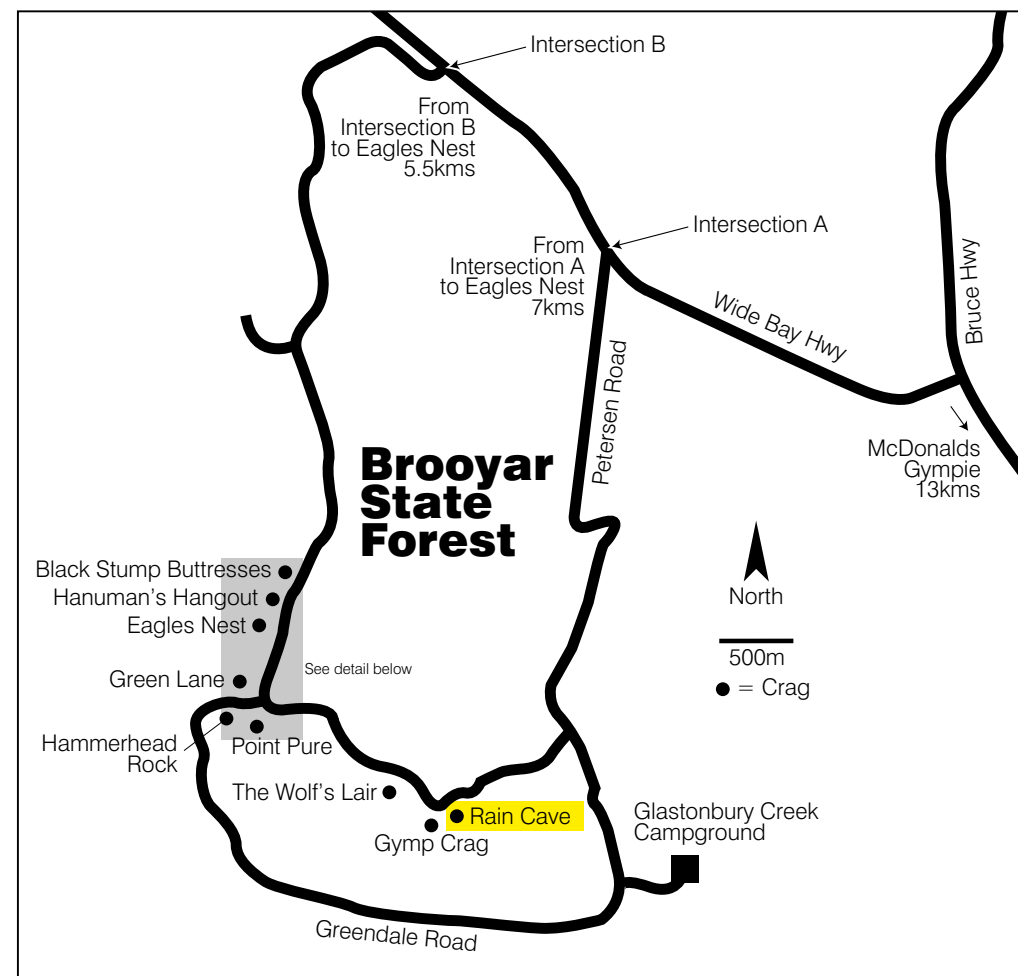

None of the following problems use the bottom ledge!
